NOTES

Care should be taken at the road junctions near the war memorial in Alnwick and riders should regroup after navigating this junction.

The descent from the top of Ros Castle is steep and narrow with a cattle grid half way down the descent.

On the way to and leaving Ingram the route requires riding on a short section of the A167, riders should regroup before and after riding this section. Depending on the traffic conditions it may be safer to split into smaller groups.

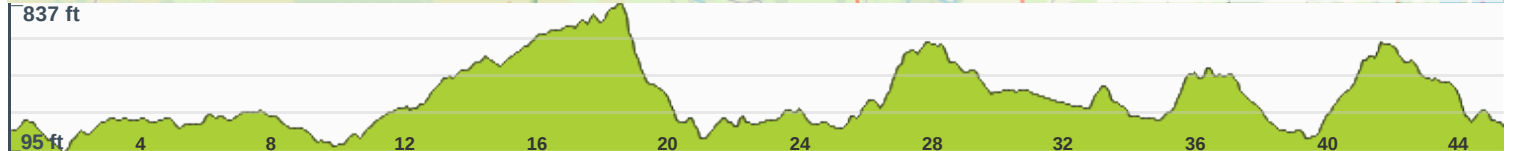

On the descents between Roddam and Ingram the road surface is uneven with potholes and grave so care should be taken.

The alternative route from Ingram Vally involves crossing a foot bridge, riders should dismount on the foot bridge.

It is strongly advised to use the footbridge to cross the river before Abberwick. The ford is always slippery and is very dangerous if there has been any rainfall.

Descending Clayport bank into Alnwick the route turns right near the bottom of the decent, simultaneously signalling and breaking for this turning can be difficult so good road positioning should be used to make your intentions clear.
